To Whom It May Concern,

The Miami Beach Botanical Garden welcomes this opportunity to present a letter of reference for Greenbrook Pools which has been an integral partner in the recent $1.2 Million landscape renovation project at our public garden.

Greenbrook was responsible for building a pond and wetland that are significant elements in the garden designed by acclaimed landscape architect Raymond Jungles and funded by the City of Miami Beach General Obligation Bonds program, administered by the City's Capital Improvements Project Office. The contract for the renovation was awarded to Harbour Construction as general contractor and its team of sub-contractors including Greenbrook Pools. The Garden was closed on June 6 and officially reopened to the public on October 25, 2011.

Greenbrook was dedicated and professional in completing the water features within this five month period and worked exceptionally well as part of the team. Their expertise and knowledge resulted in a project that was on time and of the highest quality workmanship. Since reopening we have heard nothing but compliments and delight from visitors seeing the new water features.

We have the utmost respect for Greenbrook Pools and its management and staff and their service to the Garden. It was truly a pleasure to be involved with them in this project that transformed the Miami Beach Botanical Garden from a lovely but outdated landscape to an amazing new public garden for Miami Beach residents and visitors.
